CLOSE-UP

A HERO FOR DAISY
SUN. 9 PM (ECL)

The inspirational story of Olympian Chris Ernst is detailed in this documentary. In 1976, Ernst led her rowing team into the Yale athletic director's office to protest the lack of locker-room facilities for women. In front of a New York Times reporter, the women stripped and exposed the term "Title IX" on their chests and backs. Blending talks with administrators, coaches and teammates, the film shows how the action sparked Yale and then the Nation to comply with Title IX, the gender-equity law passed four years earlier. The film was written and directed by Mary Mazzio, whose intent was to provide girls, including her daughter, Daisy, with strong role models. (1:30)
